

BERLIN PREDICTS EARLY COLLAPSE OF FRENCH RESISTANCE

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

Hitler's legions began their long-awaited frontal attack on the mighty Maginot Line today while thousands of their comrades marched into the surrendered French capital of Paris.

The attack on the vast French defense system was launched from the vicinity of the Saar River, the official Berlin communique stated. The fall of Montmedy, cornerstone of the Maginot Line "hinge" paved the way for the German attack, Berlin said.

Le Havre was captured, the French armies in retreat from the sea to Montmedy and heavily armored tank columns over-running the French as they fell back in the Champagne country, the German communique claimed.

The Nazi communique said:

"The strength of resistance of the French northern army has collapsed. The River Seine below Paris has been crossed on a wide front and Le Havre captured. On the whole front from Paris to the Maginot Line near Sedan the enemy is in full retirement."

Berlin newspaper editorials insisted that complete disintegration of France militarily now is only a matter of days, to be followed by ultimate defeat of both the Allies. Capture of Paris was described as symbolic of the "smashing defeat of the democracies."

But the French and British were determined to keep on fighting—in France, in England, in the sea, in the air, even in their possessions overseas—come what may.

While Premier Paul Reynaud's government sought a new refuge, all France waited with bated breath for President Roosevelt's reply to Reynaud's latest and "final" appeal for aid and an American declaration against Nazi Germany.

While the nation waited, some ten million of its citizens fled before the German advance, and some of the refugees were reported running out of food.

German occupation of Paris was regarded in London as the gravest news received by the Allies in the entire nine months of war.

England made no secret of its realization that the Nazi military machine had overwhelmed determined resistance with clock-like precision, advancing almost to the hour of its pre-arranged time table.

But at the same time there was no slackening of British determination to lend France every possible aid. The TOURS, France, June 14 —Facing hopeless odds, the French army abandoned Paris today as the whole northern line east of the capital began to crumble.

An official French communique admitted that French troops protecting Paris "have retired from various parts of the city."

Semi-official spokesmen admitted that Montmedy was gravely menaced and observers predicted an early end to French resistance unless some "miracle" such as an American declaration of war occurs.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The German high command has already announced the fall of Montmedy.)

Paris was abandoned to save it from needless destruction, the communique said. The French government is now moving out of threatened Tours.

Semi-official quarters here stressed France's lack of men and materials although the army still is fighting desperately.

On the extreme Western Front, the Germans have massed armored and motorized elements "to a degree hitherto unknown in warfare."

These elements are beginning to overwhelm the French, it was said, who are dying by thousands "in attempting to fight off tanks with rifles, pistols and even their bare fists."

A semi-official statement said: "These divisions are beginning to overwhelm our troops."

Reynaud's "Last" Appeal Heard; Congressmen State Beliefs

WASHINGTON, June 14—Official Washington—White House and congress, Democrats and Republicans alike—today viewed with deepest sympathy the desperate and "last" appeal of French Premier Reynaud for immediate, whole-hearted American aid to the sorely-stricken Allied armies.

But it appeared that the White House had summed up the answer: "Everything possible already is being done."

A representative cross-section of congressional opinion continued to show overwhelming opposition to an American declaration of war—for which Reynaud apparently had pleaded last night over the radio when he asked: "Will they, (Americans) still hesitate to declare themselves against Nazi Germany?"

President Roosevelt may make an informal reply to the French appeal later in the day. A formal answer awaited actual receipt by the White House of the message Reynaud said over the radio he had dispatched.

Pepper For Allies

Strongest immediate reaction in favor of the French plea for still more succor came from Sen. Claude Pepper (D) Fla., ardent New Dealer who has repeatedly but unsuccessfully tried to persuade the senate to vote to send the Allies army and navy planes in large numbers at once.

"It seems to me," said Pepper, (Continued on Page Four)

MERCY LINER'S PURSER HURLED OFF BOAT, DIES

GALWAY, Ireland, June 14 —Paul Phillips of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., purser's clerk aboard the United States liner Washington, died today after being thrown into the water when a wave struck a launch taking American refugees from the war zone aboard the vessel.

Members of the launch crew leaped overboard and dragged Phillips back into the boat, but he died soon afterwards.

With some 900 refugees already aboard the Washington, hundreds more were expected from England today.

U. S. ARMY CORPS AREA SEEKING ENLISTMENTS

COLUMBUS, June 14—The 5th U. S. Army Corps intensified its enlistment drive today to reach a quota of 1875 for June, Brigadier General Campbell B. Hodges announced.

Young men between the ages of 18 to 35 in Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia and Kentucky will be contacted in the enlistment drive.

EQUIPMENT MOVING SLOWLY TO ALLIES

WASHINGTON, June 14—Deliveries of American war materials to the Allies today are proceeding at a snail's pace despite President Roosevelt's efforts to rush vital supplies to the embattled French and British forces.

As congress agreed on a bill which, in effect, sanctions transfer of surplus American military equipment to the Allies, authorities admitted that only a small quantity of government airplanes and ordnance equipment actually has been turned over.

Yesterday the War Department released another 30 airplanes for Allied use, bringing the total number of planes withdrawn from the army and navy to 224.

It is learned, however, that these 80 planes are so obsolete that considerable reconditioning work must be done on them before they can be used for combat.

Although Mr. Roosevelt has ordered the army and navy to comb their resources for materials that can be spared, it is reported that the Allies have actually obtained less than $40,000,000 worth of equipment, exclusive of aircraft.

The international status of the zone will continue.

GENEVA—A rumor—absolutely unconfirmed and at variance with official French utterances—circulated in Geneva today to the effect France might enter separate peace negotiations with Germany if there is no United States reply to Premier Paul Reynaud's "final" appeal for aid.

Washington C. H. Repeals Parallel Parking Law

WASHINGTON C. H., June 14 — Within thirty days, Washington C. H. will change its present system of parallel parking to a system of angle parking, with greater slope given parking lines.

The change is the result of an ordinance passed in City Council Wednesday evening, after 43 business heads on Court Street had expressed their preference for angle parking, and their Chairman S. A. Murry, had called for council to repeal the present parallel parking system.

The new parking lines will be drawn at an angle of between 45 and 25 degrees, compared with the present 45 degree lines in the remainder of the downtown area. Angle parking is to extend the full length of Court Street, but the ordinance adopted does not change parking on the other streets, the three hour parking and the no-double parking ordinances remaining in effect.

Offensive On Formidable Fortifications Follows Fall Of 'City Of Light' With Defending Troops Beating Retreat

BERLIN, June 14—German troops today launched a frontal attack against the Maginot Line along the Saar River.

The long-awaited offensive against the formidable eastern fortifications of France was announced in the regular daily communique of the German high command which disclosed the occupation of Paris and Le Havre and complete breakdown of French resistance between Montmedy and the sea.

The communique said:

"The second gigantic campaign in the West has been victoriously concluded.

Resistance Broken

"The strength of resistance of the French northern army has collapsed. The River Seine below Paris has been crossed on a wide front and Le Havre captured.

"On the whole front from Paris to the Maginot Line near Sedan the enemy is in full retirement.

"At several points our tank and motorized divisions have broken through retiring enemy troops, getting ahead of them. In these cases, the enemy fled leaving behind his full equipment.

"Infantry divisions broke through the protective cordon around Paris. Enemy forces were insufficient for the protection of the French capital. Our victorious troops have been marching into Paris since this forenoon.

"East of the Marne (Champagne), Vitry Le Francois has been taken. The southern outskirts of the Argonne Forest have been reached. Le Mort Homme Hill, northeast of Verdun, was stormed last night.

"Montmedy, which formed a strong cornerstone for the Maginot Line, has been captured.

"The third stage, pursuit of the enemy to final destruction, has begun.

"Early this morning our troops started a frontal attack on the Maginot Line along the Saar Front.

"On June 13, our fighting and dive-bombing air units despite bad weather supported the army at many points along the front by taking part in ground fighting. Concentrations of troops and marching and transport columns in the rear of the enemy lines were successfully bombed and attacked with machine gun fire.

Airdromes, Rails Hit

"Considerable damage to enemy airdromes, railway stations and tracks was caused by our air force, particularly in the region to the east of the Marne.

"Two enemy transports were sunk along the coast near Le Havre. Three others were damaged, among them a ship of 10,000 tons.

"Anti-aircraft batteries north of Le Havre sank six enemy transport vessels, damaged three more and forced one British destroyer to turn back.

"One of our U-boats yesterday sank the British auxiliary cruiser Scotstown of 17,000 tons.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Lloyd's registry of merchant vessels lists no British vessel of this name.)

"Another U-boat succeeded in firing at and sinking a 12,000-ton vessel sailing in convoy under the utmost protection north of the Hebrides Islands."

In the complete absence of details of the German entry into Paris, Berlin newspapers merely featured brief announcement of the capital's fall and the high command's communique.

Crowds gathered in front of loudspeakers cheered when the fall of Paris was announced, but Berlin generally accepted the news in a calm, matter of fact manner. German military authorities for days had been predicting the city's early collapse.

Shortly before Paris fell, Reich Press Chief Otto Dietrich, close aide of Chancellor Hitler, summoned foreign correspondents into the war area and dramatically proclaimed the Allied cause as lost.

Fall of Paris, German authorities said, "means the twilight of French military might."

Dietrich said that a German victory is assured regardless of any outside aid that might be hastened to the Western European powers.

The press chief declared:

"We have never had a critical hour since May 10. Germany has remained on top."

Since Dietrich made his statement within an hour after leaving Hitler's headquarters, it can be assumed that his words accurately reflect the self-assurance and confidence of high German quarters.

German quarters contended, furthermore, that facts supporting his words presage a "quick end from a military point of view" for both France and England.

NEWCOMERSTOWN, June 14 —The strike called May 25 at the Heller Brothers Company plant in Newcomerstown has been settled, J. R. Wood, plant manager, announced today.

Wood said that under terms of the agreement the A. F. of L. union lost its demand for a closed shop. He said settlement was based on agreement by the company to dismiss contempt of court charges against George Edgerton, Cleveland AFL organizer, and eight other union men.

The nine had been charged with violating terms of a picketing injunction. The plant normally employs 750 and by the agreement all will return to work Monday.

Wood also revealed that the company would discontinue the use of its own power plant and use Ohio Power Company electricity which was wired into the plant during the strike.

The company manufactures files used in the airplane industry. A national guard observer was sent to Newcomerstown last week after violence was reported by local officials.

FIVE QUESTIONS TO BE STUDIED BY LEGISLATORS

Bricker Calls Assembly To Meet Monday For Brief Session

TICKET SPLIT DEBATED

More Funds For Relief, Money For Pensioners On Program

COLUMBUS, June 14—A five-point emergency legislative program, highlighted by proposals to increase state relief and old age pension appropriations immediately, was outlined today in a proclamation by Governor Bricker calling the 93rd General Assembly into extraordinary session beginning Monday night.

The chief executive announced he would appear in person before a joint session of the senate and house Monday at 8 p. m. to urge early action on legislation for the following purposes:

- 1—The appropriation of additional funds for relief.
- 2—The appropriation of additional funds for old age pensioners whose claims have been approved but for whom no money is available.
- 3—The amendment of the Old Age assistance law so as to conform with recent federal amendments to the Security Act raising the maximum allowance for assistance from $30 to $30 per month.
- 4—The amendment of the election law of Ohio with respect to the preparation and form of separate ballots for state and national tickets in the November election.
- 5—The amendment of the laws providing for aid to dependent children to conform with recent federal enactments.

Three, Four Days Needed
Bricker expressed the belief that the entire program could be disposed of within three or four days, or before the Republican National Convention opens in Philadelphia June 24.

At a press conference last night at which he announced his long-awaited decision regarding a special session, Bricker asserted new taxes would be needed to provide additional funds for relief and old age pensions.

He contended that an estimated $3,000,000 surplus in the state treasury would be more than sufficient to take care of the estimated $1,400,000 needed for relief and $1,000,000 for pensions.

Bricker added that even the proposal to increase the old age pension maximum from $30 to $40 per month would not require an increase in the tax burden this year "or during the next biennium."

The governor estimated that at least 15,000 persons now on the old age pension waiting list would be benefited by the proposed appropriation. Approximately 125,000 persons now are receiving pensions.

Legislative leaders were to meet in Columbus today to discuss plans for the session and to prepare bills covering the proposed emergency program.

All Emergencies
Bricker declared all proposed legislation would be presented for passage as emergency measures. That means a two-thirds vote of members would be required for passage.

No opposition is expected by the administration on four of the questions, but there was some indication that a battle might develop over the plan to split the state and national tickets in the November election.

Several days ago, the Hamilton County delegation to the General Assembly went on record as opposing passage of the ballot proposal. It was understood that view was the result of "pressure" by followers of U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft who contended it might injure Taft's chances to obtain the Republican presidential nomination.

Bricker asserted to newspaper men that the ballot question was strictly a local one and had no national significance. He flouted assertions that it might give the impression that Ohio Republicans were not certain the state would be in the G. O. P. column nationally in November.

"It has no political significance outside Ohio," Bricker declared to reporters. "I merely want a clear-cut issue on whether Ohio voters prefer the type of administration they now have or the kind they had for two terms previous to this one."

Slap At Davey
This was construed as an intimation that Bricker wanted to avoid even the remotest possibility that his opponent, former Gov. Martin L. Davey, might be swept into office in the event of a Democratic landslide similar to that of 1936.

Republicans repeatedly have charged that the overwhelming vote given President Roosevelt four years ago swept Davey into office for a second term.

However, political leaders pointed out that if the Hamilton County legislators persisted in opposing the ballot proposal, there was a possibility it might not be passed as an emergency measure.

A total of 91 votes are required in the lower house for passage of the measure. Since Republicans admit there are only 95 G. O. P. votes there, concerted opposition by eight members from Hamilton County could balk passage.

According to Governor Bricker, proposed legislation to increase aid to dependent children was a more or less routine procedure that would merely enable the state welfare department to utilize fully $800,000 in federal funds now at its disposal.

Joan Crawford and Fredric March, a new co-starring due for the screen, score one of the sensational surprises of the year in "Susan and God," picturization of the Rachel Crothers' Broadway hit, which opens Sunday at the Cliftona Theatre. As the social gadabout, Susan, who adopts a new social movement as a fad and attempts to convert all her friends while ignoring the tangle of her own family life, Miss Crawford wins new spurs as a dramatic actress. March, returning to the screen following his stage hit in "The American Way," turns in one of his most convincing performances as Barrie, the inebriate husband who gradually wins control of the situation. Distinguished supporting roles are contributed by Ruth Hussey, John Carroll, Rita Hayworth, Nigel Bruce, Bruce Cabot, Rita Quigley and Rose Hobart, and George Cukor, directing, has achieved an even more satisfying piece of entertainment than his earlier success, "The Women."

FIVE QUESTIONS TO BE STUDIED BY LEGISLATORS

Bricker Calls Assembly To Meet Monday For Brief Session

TICKET SPLIT DEBATED

More Funds For Relief, Money For Pensioners On Program

COLUMBUS, June 14—A five-point emergency legislative program, highlighted by proposals to increase state relief and old age pension appropriations immediately, was outlined today in a proclamation by Governor Bricker calling the 93rd General Assembly into extraordinary session beginning Monday night.

The chief executive announced he would appear in person before a joint session of the senate and house Monday at 8 p. m. to urge early action on legislation for the following purposes:

1—The appropriation of additional funds for relief.

2—The appropriation of additional funds for old age pensioners whose claims have been approved but for whom no money is available.

3—The amendment of the Old Age assistance law so as to conform with recent federal amendments to the Security Act raising the maximum allowance for assistance from $30 to $30 per month.

4—The amendment of the election law of Ohio with respect to the preparation and form of separate ballots for state and national tickets in the November election.

5—The amendment of the laws providing for aid to dependent children to conform with recent federal enactments.

Three, Four Days Needed

Bricker expressed the belief that the entire program could be disposed of within three or four days, or before the Republican National Convention opens in Philadelphia June 24.

At a press conference last night at which he announced his long-awaited decision regarding a special session, Bricker asserted no new taxes would be needed to provide additional funds for relief and old age pensions.

He contended that an estimated $3,000,000 surplus in the state treasury would be more than sufficient to take care of the estimated $1,400,000 needed for relief and $1,000,000 for pensions.

Bricker added that even the proposal to increase the old age pension maximum from $30 to $40 per month would not require an increase in the tax burden this year "or during the next biennium."

The governor estimated that at least 15,000 persons now on the old age pension waiting list would be benefited by the proposed appropriation. Approximately 125,000 persons now are receiving pensions.

Legislative leaders were to meet in Columbus today to discuss plans for the session and to prepare bills covering the proposed emergency program.

All Emergencies

Bricker declared all proposed legislation would be presented for passage as emergency measures. That means a two-thirds vote of members would be required for passage.

No opposition is expected by the administration on four of the questions, but there was some indication that a battle might develop over the plan to split the state and national tickets in the November election.

Several days ago, the Hamilton County delegation to the General Assembly went on record as opposing passage of the ballot provision before the G. O. P. convention. It was understood that view was the result of "pressure" by followers of U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft who contended it might injure Taft's chances to obtain the Republican presidential nomination.

Bricker asserted to newspapermen that the ballot question was strictly a local one and had no national significance. He flouted assertions that it might give the impression that Ohio Republicans were not certain the state would be in the G. O. P. column nationally in November.

"It has no political significance outside Ohio," Bricker declared to reporters. "I merely want a clear-cut issue on whether Ohio voters prefer the type of administration they now have or the kind they had for two terms previous to this one."

Slap At Davey

This was construed as an intimation that Bricker wanted to avoid even the remotest possibility that his opponent, former Gov. Martin L. Davey, might be swept into office in the event of a Democratic landslide similar to that of 1936.

Republicans repeatedly have charged that the overwhelming vote given President Roosevelt four years ago swept Davey into office for a second term.

However, political leaders pointed out that if the Hamilton County legislators persisted in opposing the ballot proposal, there was a possibility it might not be passed as an emergency measure.

A total of 91 votes are required in the lower house for passage of the measure. Since Republicans admit there are only 95 G. O. P. votes there, concerted opposition by eight members from Hamilton County could balk passage.

Ouster Demand Of Indian Team Surprises Vitt

Manager Of Cleveland Club Confers With Bradley About Charges Against Him

CLEVELAND, June 14—Manager Oscar Vitt of the Cleveland Indians and Alva Bradley, president of the club, were to have a meeting today to discuss a demand made by veteran players of the club that Vitt be dismissed from his post.

In an act unprecedented in recent baseball history, virtually every veteran player was in a group that met with Bradley when the team arrived in Cleveland yesterday after completing a disastrous eastern tour.

EASTERN CREWS SEEKING TO END REIGN OF WEST

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, June 14 — It's Washington against the East in the annual intercollegiate rowing regatta at Poughkeepsie on Tuesday of next week.

While this section has its best chance in the last 10 years to win the sweep-winning classic on the Hudson, there still is a fear, as usual, over the West's representative, and not without reason. The winner of the Washington-California regatta has won at Poughkeepsie every year in the last decade, except in 1931 and 1938, and that is enough to cause some concern among here in advance calculations on the gruelling four-mile pull. If Washington doesn't come through, however, then Cornell or Columbia will, barring an upset.

Cornell and Columbia are given an excellent chance by virtue of great seasons behind them in the annual eastern campaign. Cornell is big, powerful, rangy, smooth and unbeaten. Columbia is smaller, but still the best crew Columbia has had in a decade, and beaten only by Yale. The margin was 3/5 of a second. The eastern dark horse is Syracuse, which beat Wisconsin by six lengths at three miles earlier this month.

GLITT CREW UNBEATEN IN CHILLICOTHE LOOP

The Glitt softball team remained in first place in the Chillicothe league Friday after its 12-7 victory over the Massieville Oliver Store crew. Bill Hegele, who gave up 10 hits, pitched the route for the Glitt crew.

Six errors were charged against the winners and eight against the losers.

Roby and Ansel Roof of the Circleville team weighed in with three hits each, one of Roby's being a double and one of Roof's a triple. The Glitt team is the only undefeated club in the league.

Brooklyn Fans Fight For Red Series Ducats

By Ed Kiely

NEW YORK, June 14—Pity poor Larry McPhail, the modern King Midas, who has the greatest show since "East Lynne," but who doesn't have the room to accommodate the public clamoring to see his super-colossal production.

Opening today at Ebbets Field (seating capacity 35,000) is an all-important series between the Cincinnati Reds and McPhail's cherished Brooklyn Dodgers, with the leadership in the National League the stakes. Fans to fill the park several times over will be storming the gates for ducats.

It is believed that by Sunday when the two teams are scheduled to meet in a doubleheader finale, the fervid Flatbush rooters will have worked themselves to such a frenzied pitch that McPhail will be forced to throw up a barricade to save the park from destruction.

Yesterday none of the teams in the National League was scheduled. Beginning today, the western clubs are making their second invasion of the East, with the Pittsburgh Pirates playing the New York Giants, the Chicago Cubs stopping off at Boston and the St. Louis Cardinals invading Philadelphia.

The Cleveland Indians evicted the Detroit Tigers from second place in the American League with a 3 to 2 tenth inning victory in the only Major League game yesterday. Second Baseman Charley Gehring blew the contest for the Tigers with a wild heave that scored the winning run. Al Smith, pitching himself out of a jam in the tenth, earned his sixth victory of the year. The other clubs were not scheduled.

Ex-Card To Be Inserted In Fourth Slot; Davis' Addition Lauded

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, June 14—Leo Durocher, peppy Dodger pilot, was around today exultantly claiming the pennant for Brooklyn and seriously debating the wisdom of starting Whitlow Wyatt in the first game of the World Series—"against the Yanks or any other bums that may win the American League flag."

And all this because Larry McPhail had judiciously laid out $100,000 to $200,000 (your guess is as good as any) and four non-descript players for Jolting Joe Medwick and Curt Davis.

"We can't miss now," exulted Leo. "Muscles (that's Medwick) will give us just the right hand power we need. And, believe me, he'll hustle in Brooklyn."

"I'm going to drop him into the fourth slot in the line-up behind Walker, Lavagetto and Vosmik and just ahead of Phelps and Camilli and let me see any pitcher laugh off that bunch."

"Muscles has terrific power and nobody knows how to pitch him. He's just as liable to belt one off his ear as he is off his shoetops. And his hitting will pull the rest of the club along with him just like Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig used to pull the up the Yanks."

Go Easy, Says Joe

"Why, say, he'll add at least 50 percent to our attack," and at this point the grinning Medwick chipped in: "Go easy on those figures, Leo."

"No, I mean it," insisted Leo. "Muscles is just the guy we need to make our ball club. He wasn't satisfied in St. Louis, and a guy who's dissatisfied never does his best. These Dodger fans are going to see the real Medwick and they're going to go nuts about him."

As for Davis, Leo insists he wasn't tossed merely as lagniappe. "I really wanted him," he explained, "because he's a great pitcher. He's simply not in shape to pitch. He hasn't had enough work. I'm going to use him for a week or ten days in batting practice and run his legs off to get him right. Then I'll start him and I expect to see him win 10 or 12 and maybe more for us."

"Curt and Muscles are my kind of ball players and I think they'll mean a pennant for us. Wonder who the Yanks will use against us in that opening game?"

Ouster Demand Of Indian Team Surprises Vitt

Manager Of Cleveland Club Confers With Bradley About Charges Against Him

CLEVELAND, June 14—Manager Oscar Vitt of the Cleveland Indians and Alva Bradley, president of the club, were to have a meeting today to discuss a demand made by veteran players of the club that Vitt be dismissed from his post.

In an act unprecedented in recent baseball history, virtually every veteran player was in a group that met with Bradley when the team arrived in Cleveland yesterday after completing a disastrous eastern tour.

ONE of the best-loved of football coaches in the middle-west, Noble Kizer, 40, of Purdue, is dead. His teams lost but nine Big Ten games in seven years.

EASTERN CREWS SEEKING TO END REIGN OF WEST

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, June 14 — It's Washington against the East in the annual intercollegiate rowing regatta at Poughkeepsie on Tuesday of next week.

While this section has its best chance in the last 10 years to win the sweep-winning classic on the Hudson, there still is a fear, as usual, over the West's representative, and not without reason. The winner of the Washington-California regatta has won at Poughkeepsie every year in the last decade, except in 1931 and 1933, and that is enough to cause some concern around here in advance calculations on the grueling four-mile pull. If Washington doesn't come through, however, then Cornell or Columbia will, barring an upset.

Cornell and Columbia are given an excellent chance by virtue of great seasons behind them in the annual eastern campaign. Cornell is big, powerful, rangy, smooth and unbeaten. Columbia is smaller, but still the best crew Columbia has had in a decade, and beaten only by Yale. The margin was 3/5 of a second. The eastern dark horse is Syracuse, which beat Wisconsin by six lengths at three miles earlier this month.

GLITT CREW UNBEATEN IN CHILLICOTHE LOOP

The Glitt softball team remained in first place in the Chillicothe league Friday after its 12-7 victory over the Massieville Oliver Store crew. Bill Hegele, who gave up 10 hits, pitched the route for the Glitt crew.

Six errors were charged against the winners and eight against the losers.

Roby and Ansel Roof of the Circleville team weighed in with three hits each, one of Roby's being a double and one of Roof's a triple.

The Glitt team is the only undefeated club in the league.

Brooklyn Fans Fight For Red Series Ducats

By Ed Kiely
NEW YORK, June 14—Pity poor Larry McPhail, the modern King Midas, who has the greatest show since "East Lynne," but who doesn't have the room to accommodate the public clamoring to see his super-colossal production.

Opening today at Ebbets Field (seating capacity 35,000) is an all-important series between the Cincinnati Reds and McPhail's cherished Brooklyn Dodgers, with the leadership in the National League the stakes. Fans to fill the park several times over will be storming the gates for ducats.

It is believed that by Sunday when the two teams are scheduled to meet in a doubleheader finale, the fervid Flatbush rooters will have worked themselves to such a frenzied pitch that McPhail will be forced to throw up a barricade to save the park from destruction.

Yesterday none of the teams in the National League was scheduled. Beginning today, the western clubs are making their second invasion of the East, with the Pittsburgh Pirates playing the New York Giants, the Chicago Cubs stopping off at Boston and the St. Louis Cardinals invading Philadelphia.

The Cleveland Indians evicted the Detroit Tigers from second place in the American League with a 3 to 2 tenth inning victory in the only Major League game yesterday. Second Baseman Charley Gehringer blew the contest for the Tigers with a wild heave that scored the winning run. Al Smith, pitching himself out of a jam in the tenth, earned his sixth victory of the year. The other clubs were not scheduled.

DUROCHER SAYS DODGERS CAN'T MISS PENNANT

Brooklyn Manager Ready To Start Wyatt In World Series

BOSS HOT FOR MEDWICK

Ex-Card To Be Inserted In Fourth Slot; Davis' Addition Lauded

NEW YORK, June 14—Leo Durocher, peppery Dodger pilot, was around today exultantly claiming the pennant for Brooklyn and seriously debating the wisdom of starting Whitlow Wyatt in the first game of the World Series—"against the Yanks or any other bums that may win the American League flag."

And all this because Larry McPhail had judiciously laid out $100,000 to $200,000 (your guess is as good as any) and four nondescript players for jolting Joe Medwick and Curt Davis.

sale of war materials and planes, Dietrich declared: "Nothing on earth can now prevent an Allied defeat. "No aid from outside can help, no matter what it is or how much it is. It is too late. "The French dagger has now been broken and England and France now must pay for the past."

Paris, into which the steel-helmeted troops of Adolf Hitler's victorious armies were marching today, has capitulated to invaders on at least five occasions throughout its long history.

In 52 B. C., it was captured by Julius Caesar and his Roman legions. It was then the capital of the Parisii, a Gallic tribe who burned the town to the ground before the conquerors could move in.

At the close of the fifth century A. D., the city had grown under the administration of the Romans who built an amphitheatre, temples, and an aqueduct. It was invaded at that time by Frankish tribes under Clovis.

In the ninth century, Paris was sacked by the Danes. In 1422 Henry V of England took the city and established his court there. Paris was not restored to the king of France until 1463.

The last time Paris fell to a foreign invader was on January 28, 1871, when German troops, victors in the Franco-Prussian war, marched into the city.

In the last war, the Germans reached within 17 miles of Paris, but then the famous "taxi-cab army," composed of reinforcements rushed from Paris in the city's taxi-cabs, came into play and the Germans were held at the Marne.

It is probable that one of the first acts of the Germans on taking over Paris was to hoist the swastika from the flag pole on the top of the Eiffel Tower. It may well be flying from that famous Paris landmark now, more than 980 feet high.

CITY POLICE MEN TO USE '36 COACH FOR PATROL FLAG POLE CLIMBER HAS STREAK OF TOUGH LUCK

Circleville police will receive another police cruiser, Karl Herrmann, safety director, announced Friday.

The car is a 1936 Ford coach and will replace the cruiser now in service. The car was obtained by the city as the result of the settlement of an attachment suit started last October.

Solicitor Joe Adkins stated that the transaction had saved the city money, because otherwise the city would have been forced to purchase a new car.

When the rope on the flag pole in front of the Pickaway County court house became tangled in the pulley at the top of the pole Thursday, James Cassidy, employed by the city service department, was offered $5 by courthouse employees to climb the pole and untangle the rope.

But when Cassidy was half way up the pole, he decided he would need special climbers to get to the top, so he slid back down. As he drove away in his automobile after his special climbing equipment he ran over a boy's bicycle which lay in front of his car.

After he had returned and finished his job, and had decided to start home, he found that his car was out of gas. As he attempted to refill it, the car caught fire and the fire department had to be summoned.

So Cassidy maintains that if the flag pole rope ever tangles again, some one else can untangle it.

Whole Northern Line East Of Capital Crumbling; Montmedy Lost?

visions succeeded until today in maintaining intact the Montmedy pivot of the Maginot Line and in holding the enemy onrush in the Argonne and eastern Champagne.

"If the enemy throws into line his fresh divisions still held in reserve, taking of the Montmedy position seems inevitable."

These semi-official statements all stressed that every French division is stretched out in a thin red line, lacking depth or reserves. No reserves and no more material is available, it was said.

Urgent Need Stressed

"France needs tanks, planes and war material at once, not next week, if the fight for democracy is going to continue in Europe," a spokesman said.

"Something must be done if the hour of resurrection is to sound."

Neutral observers interpreted this as a plain warning that some definite statement of immediate aid from the United States, or a declaration of war, alone can keep France fighting.

The French war communiqué stated the retirement from the capital was carried out to spare it the "devastation which its defense would have brought."

The communiqué was issued while all France awaited the reaction of the United States to the "final" plea of Premier Paul Reynaud for aid against Germany.

"From two sides of Paris," said the war communiqué, "the enemy drive continues to increase."

"Because of this advance, troops covering Paris retired from various parts of the city, conforming with orders received."

"The French command, in renouncing direct defense of the capital and in maintaining it as an open city, desired to spare it the devastation which defense would have brought, estimating that no valuable strategic result would justify the sacrifice of Paris."

The last evacuees left Paris at midnight when the police and civil guard, acting under orders, closed the Paris gates.

This step, it was reported, was taken in view of the strength of German pressure, particularly on the western suburbs.

The French army, according to pre-arranged plans, then began to fall back on either side of the city towards a line running southward.

LOUISE FISMER NORRIS DEAD IN FORT WORTH

Mrs. Louise Norris, a native of Circleville and a former teacher in the schools of the city, died last Saturday in Fort Worth, Texas, and funeral services were conducted Monday with burial in the Fort Worth cemetery.

Mrs. Norris was a sister of Miss Elizabeth Fismar, South Scioto Circleville.

She left Circleville some years ago. Her husband, J. L. Norris, who preceded her in death, was a Fort Worth banker. Mrs. Norris was co-founder of the Kindergarten Association in the Texas city, a member of the Women's Club and one of the first members of the '93 Club. She was active also in the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Norris taught for some time in Fort Worth prior to her marriage 32 years ago.

FARMER INJURED WHEN YOUNG HORSE KICKS HIM

Carl Scothorn, a tenant on the Walnut Township farm of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Pontius of North Court Street, was severely injured Wednesday when an unruly young horse he was trying to subdue, reared and struck him in the face with one hoof which was newly shod. It required about 20 stitches to close the lacerations on Mr. Scothorn's face. He was given anti-tetanus shot and treated for his injuries by Dr. R. S. Hosler, Ashville.

Berlin Predicts Fall Of France

London Evening Standard urged Britain to still greater efforts by proclaiming:

"Democracy will not win its battles by watching. We must become a nation in arms."

First word that the Germans had entered Paris came from Washington, where it was announced that United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt had flashed the news by telephone to Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., ambassador to the refugee Polish government at Tours. At length Biddle was able to relay it to the State Department.

Hours later confirmation came from correspondents with the German armies, from Tours and finally from London, where the tidings came as a shock although they had been anticipated.

But German military authorities were joyful as their forces entered the city and pronounced the historic moment as demonstrating that "France's hour has struck."

An official Berlin announcement said the French were forced to abandon Paris owing to collapse of the entire French front from the sea to Montmedy.

Rome, meanwhile, issued a communiqué claiming that fighting had begun on the Italo-French Alpine front and that two enemy submarines had been hit in the Mediterranean. It added that Italian planes once more had bombed Tunis and the French Mediterranean port of Toulon.

From London:

German occupation of Paris—the gravest news of nine months of warfare—came as a profound shock today to London, although the sad tidings had been entirely expected in view of events of the last 48 hours.

Once more, in all sections of the British capital, there was sharp realization that the German military steam-roller had moved with machine-like precision and overwhelmed, despite incalculable losses, the stoutest resistance yet offered.

Over all obstacles, it was agreed, the German forces progressed almost to the hour of their pre-arranged time table.

In London there was no attempt, official or otherwise, to pretend that the immediate outlook of the Allies is not extremely dark, or that still more shocks are not to be expected.

But at the same time there was reiterated determination to face the future with courage and to continue to extend every possible assistance to France.

Some British circles declared some such shock was necessary for Britain to rouse itself to a supreme war effort and the London Evening Standard keynoted this sentiment in an editorial which said:

"Democracy cannot win its battles by watching. We must become a nation in arms."

A new British promise of "utmost aid" was sent to France today along with a pledge of the "indissoluble union of our two people and our two empires."

With the German forces hammering at Paris, that was the message of encouragement that went to the hard-pressed French government and fighting forces from England today as this country bent every effort to aid its ally.

London newspapers splashed French Premier Paul Reynaud's final appeal to the United States for aid across their front pages while latest dispatches from the front indicated the increasing gravity of the military situation.

Argonne, Maginot Split
The London Daily Mail said German forces were threatening to drive a wedge between the Argonne and the Maginot Line and that they were attempting the same "cutting in half" maneuver that proved successful in Holland and Belgium.

Latest British agency reports from Paris said the battle was increasing in ferocity. The glow of fires to the west lighted up Paris during the night, while increasing numbers of retreating civilians poured over the French countryside.

STATE TO GUARD RT. 22 FROM FURTHER DAMAGE

J. Perry Schumaker, official from the State Department of Highways, announced Friday that within the next two weeks the department expects to begin repair work on the levee on Route 22 west of Circleville, where early spring floods caused damage estimated at $10,000. The official said he believed an asphalt mat would be built along the levee to prevent further damage from high water.

"that if the people had the opportunity to pass on it today they would grant the aid that Premier Reynaud asks. It is unthinkable to me that we stand here and see this thing go on and do nothing. I think we should immediately redouble our efforts to send more planes, more ships, more arms, more ammunition."

Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, one of the leading Republican presidential candidates, observed: "The appeal is a moving one, but it is one that would be difficult to respond to."

Sen. Henrik Shipstead (F-L) Minn., said: "I don't see how we could do anything in time to do any good, even if we wanted to, and decided to go to war. We have no army and we have no planes."

Chairman Sol Bloom, of the house foreign affairs committee, said: "I sympathize fully with France. But we cannot do the impossible, of course. We cannot go beyond what the law says. Men we cannot and will not send."

Others voiced similar sentiments—those who would comment at all. Many members of congress refused to comment, saying that the matter was one for the White House and State Department.

President Roosevelt and his National Defense council worked feverishly to speed up private production and delivery of government supplies to the Allies. So far, however, only 224 army and navy planes have found their way into Franco-British hands and the military command is reluctant to part with many more.

It was pointed out that last Monday, when the President at Charlottesville (Va.), pledged the American "material resources" so urgently needed by the Allies, he did it with one reservation—that the United States itself must prepare at once "for any emergency and every defense." Mr. Roosevelt warned then that "once more the future of the nation and of the American people is at stake."

BULLITT TELLS U. S. OF FALL

WASHINGTON, June 14 — The German army is "inside the gates of Paris," the United States ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt, reported to the State Department early today.

Bullitt's laconic message, giving no details and leaving official Washington mystified as to the fate of the ancient cultural center of Europe, was relayed to the department by Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., American ambassador to the refugee Polish government at Tours.

Biddle telephoned the State Department at 1 a. m. and said that Bullitt had informed him from Paris, where he remained when most of the French government retired to Tours, that:

"The German army is inside the gates of Paris. The city is quiet."

That was all. Just 13 words to tell that the famous French city, which had fallen only once before in the world's history, again apparently was in the hands, or about to be in the hands, of a new captor.

Bullitt sent his fateful notification to Biddle at seven o'clock last night, Paris time (1 p. m. E.S.T.) but it was one o'clock this morning, Washington time (6 a. m. Paris time) before Biddle got the word through to the State Department.

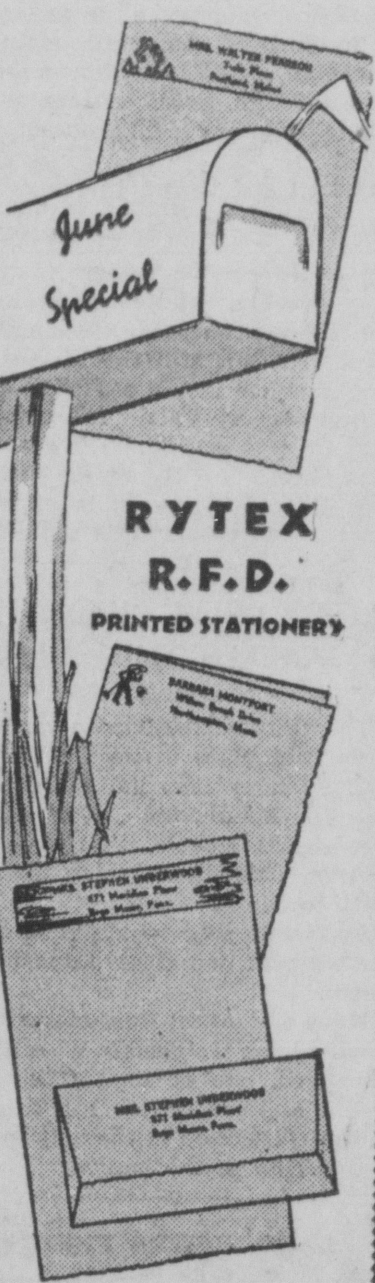

The times involved indicate that the Germans were in Paris even before French Premier Paul Reynaud broadcast his "last appeal" to President Roosevelt, imploring the United States to "declare itself against Germany" and to dispatch a cloud of warplanes to France's aid immediately.

Administration officials who were quickly given the news by telephone interpreted the second sentence of Bullitt's report — "the city is quiet"—to mean that the Nazi invaders were meeting with no opposition within the city proper. The French, it was reported yesterday, decided to strip the city of all military character to preclude its destruction by the German "blitzkrieg."

sale of war materials and planes, Dietrich declared: "Nothing on earth can now prevent an Allied defeat. "No aid from outside can help, no matter what it is or how much it is. It is too late. "The French dagger has now been broken and England and France now must pay for the past."

Paris, into which the steel-helmeted troops of Adolf Hitler's victorious armies were marching today, has capitulated to invaders on at least five occasions throughout its long history.

In 52 B. C., it was captured by Julius Caesar and his Roman legions. It was then the capital of the Parisii, a Gallic tribe who burned the town to the ground before the conquerors could move in.

At the close of the fifth century A. D., the city had grown under the administration of the Romans who built an amphitheatre, temples, and an aqueduct. It was invaded at that time by Frankish tribes under Clovis.

In the ninth century, Paris was sacked by the Danes. In 1422 Henry V of England took the city and established his court there. Paris was not restored to the king of France until 1463.

The last time Paris fell to a foreign invader was on January 28, 1871, when German troops, victors in the Franco-Prussian war, marched into the city.

In the last war, the Germans reached within 17 miles of Paris, but then the famous "taxi-cab army," composed of reinforcements rushed from Paris in the city's taxi-cabs, came into play and the Germans were held at the Marne.

It is probable that one of the first acts of the Germans on taking over Paris was to hoist the swastika from the flag pole on the top of the Eiffel Tower. It may well be flying from that famous Paris landmark now, more than 980 feet high.

CITY POLICE MEN TO USE '36 COACH FOR PATROL FLAG POLE CLIMBER HAS STREAK OF TOUGH LUCK

Circleville police will receive another police cruiser, Karl Herrmann, safety director, announced Friday.

The car is a 1936 Ford coach and will replace the cruiser now in service. The car was obtained by the city as the result of the settlement of an attachment suit started last October.

Solicitor Joe Adkins stated that the transaction had saved the city money, because otherwise the city would have been forced to purchase a new car.

When the rope on the flag pole in front of the Pickaway County court house became tangled in the pulley at the top of the pole Thursday, James Cassidy, employed by the city service department, was offered $5 by court-house employees to climb the pole and untangle the rope.

But when Cassidy was half way up the pole, he decided he would need special climbers to get to the top, so he slid back down. As he drove away in his automobile after his special climbing equipment he ran over a boy's bicycle which lay in front of his car.

After he had returned and finished his job, and had decided to start home, he found that his car was out of gas. As he attempted to refill it, the car caught fire and the fire department had to be summoned. So Cassidy maintains that if the flag pole rope ever tangles again, some one else can untangle it.

visions succeeded until today in maintaining intact the Montmedy pivot of the Maginot Line and in holding the enemy onrush in the Argonne and eastern Champagne.

"If the enemy throws into line his fresh divisions still held in reserve, taking of the Montmedy position seems inevitable."

These semi-official statements all stressed that every French division is stretched out in a thin red line, lacking depth or reserves. No reserves and no more material is available, it was said.

Urgent Need Stressed

"France needs tanks, planes and war material at once, not next week, if the fight for democracy is going to continue in Europe," a spokesman said.

"Something must be done if the hour of resurrection is to sound."

Neutral observers interpreted this as a plain warning that some definite statement of immediate aid from the United States, or a declaration of war, alone can keep France fighting.

The French war communiqué stated the retirement from the capital was carried out to spare it the "devastation which its defense would have brought."

The communiqué was issued while all France awaited the reaction of the United States to the "final" plea of Premier Paul Reynaud for aid against Germany.

"From two sides of Paris," said the war communiqué, "the enemy drive continues to increase."

"Because of this advance, troops covering Paris retired from various parts of the city, conforming with orders received."

"The French command, in renouncing direct defense of the capital and in maintaining it as an open city, desired to spare it the devastation which defense would have brought, estimating that no valuable strategic result would justify the sacrifice of Paris."

Haggai Urges Building of God's House

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for June 16 is the book of Haggai, the Golden Text being Heb. 10:24, 25, "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works," to offset some of the destruction that is going on.

OUR GOLDEN TEXT gives us the thesis for today's lesson, especially the part that says, "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works," to offset some of the destruction that is going on.

At the time that Haggai the prophet was urging the people to set about rebuilding the temple of Jerusalem, a remnant of the Jewish people had been permitted to come back to their homeland after exile in foreign lands. The temple was in ruins and the people utterly discouraged, and as is usual at such times, their own individual troubles seemed more important to them than the doing of anything for the glory of Jehovah.

Darius was king, and it was in the second year of his reign, about 520 B. C., when Haggai decided to awaken the people from their indifference and discouragement to build the temple Jehovah would be pleased, he told them, for they had neglected Him and this was undoubtedly the cause of much of their troubles.

It was good psychology, quite aside from the religious side of the matter, for Haggai to rouse the people, for in working constructively toward a good end, they would forget their troubles. Doing some constructive work that is going to help the world, always is the best course to pursue, when one is downhearted because of the hardness of men's hearts and the waywardness of their lives.

The people were inclined to think that the time had not yet come to rebuild the ruined temple. You remember, in our last lesson, that word had come to Ezekiel in exile, that the city of Jetherhood furnished music accompanied by Paul Rose.

Haggai Urges Building of God's House

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for June 16 is the book of Haggai, the Golden Text being Heb. 10:24, 25, "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works," to offset some of the destruction that is going on.

At the time that Haggai the prophet was urging the people to set about rebuilding the temple of Jerusalem, a remnant of the Jewish people had been permitted to come back to their homeland after exile in foreign lands. The temple was in ruins and the people utterly discouraged, and as is usual at such times, their own individual troubles seemed more important to them than the doing of anything for the glory of Jehovah.

Darius was king, and it was in the second year of his reign, about 520 B. C., when Haggai decided to awaken the people from their indifference and discouragement to build the temple. Jehovah would be pleased, he told them, for they had neglected Him and this was undoubtedly the cause of much of their troubles.

It was good psychology, quite aside from the religious side of the matter, for Haggai to rouse the people, for in working constructively toward a good end, they would forget their troubles. Doing some constructive work that is going to help the world, always is the best course to pursue, when one is downhearted because of the hardness of men's hearts and the waywardness of their lives.

The people were inclined to think that the time had not yet come to rebuild the ruined temple. You remember, in our last lesson, that word had come to Ezekiel in exile, that the city of Jerusalem had been destroyed. Haggai roused them with the stirring words:

"Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your cieled homes, and this house lie waste? . . .

"Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Consider your ways.

"Go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house, and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, saith the Lord."

"Ye looked for much, and lo it came to little, and when ye brought it home I did blow upon it. Why? saith the Lord of hosts, 'Because of mine house that is waste, and ye run every man unto his own house.

"Therefore the heaven over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit."

Suffering as they were, the people were in a mood to listen to what Haggai said, and Zerubbabel, the son of Shealtiel and governor of Judah, and Joshua, son of Josedech, the high priest, led them to start the rebuilding.

When the temple was partly built, however, some who remembered the old building built by Solomon, are said to have wept that the new one was not so grand or rich. But they were comforted by the word of the Lord as brought to them by Haggai, who said:

"Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the Lord, and be strong, O Joshua of Josedech, the high priest, and be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the Lord, and work, for I am with you, saith the Lord of hosts."

What did their poor little temple matter? They had all done the best they could for the glory of Jehovah, and He would "fill it with glory," Haggai told them. Then he exhorted them to be always clean, separated from sin, and they would prosper.

We may not always find that leading righteous lives brings us material riches. But at least we have an inner peace when we earnestly try to "provoke unto love and good works," and to put away from us hate and intolerance. Of the temple which these returned exiles had built it is said:

"The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of hosts and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of hosts."

The prophet Haggai's antecedents are not known. He was not one of the great prophets, but rather a conscientious preacher who tried to lead his people in the right way.

It is estimated that secondary school teachers in the United States, spend on addition to nearly 30 hours a week in actual classroom teaching, an average of ten hours a week to out-of-class activities pertaining to their jobs.

TO ALL OF US

FOLK: Flag Day, today, is the anniversary of the day in 1777 on which Congress formally adopted the Stars and Stripes as the flag of the new nation then being established. Today we observe the occasion and honor the flag by flying it from private homes as well as public buildings and thoroughfares. This year it might be well to add another kind of observance. Let us consider what the flag stands for and what our nation would be like without a background of self-chosen freedom and law. To the American eye the Stars and Stripes make the most beautiful flag in the world. They have also been the symbol of hope and opportunity to countless men, women and children born under other flags. These sentiments are based, not on the colors or the design of the flag, but on the character of our democracy and the ideals of its founders and citizens. Our flag is the symbol of a government built on popular representation, justice for all, freedom, racial and religious tolerance, law vested in the courts but responsible to the people and the Constitution. The same flag might fly over a nation in the thrall of cruelty, injustice and tyranny if we, the people, ever forgot our faith in the principles of the Declaration of Independence and the Preamble to the Constitution of the United States. It is a beautiful and inspiring flag. Let us keep ourselves true to it by keeping true to the best that is America, and to the practice of an ever-improving democracy.

TO CITIZENS

FRIENDS: The Pickaway County Agricultural Society conducted its first meeting this week in preparation for the 1940 festival to be held in October, as usual. During this meeting several matters of importance were discussed, the most vital of which was certainly that dealing with finances. Without more cooperation from some persons the show will not be conducted, directors believe. Last year despite excellent weather and mammoth crowds that spent a lot of money the show barely made expenses. That there is something wrong is certain, and officials of the Pumpkin Show intend to do something about it. They are setting up their 1940 show on a budget system. Before they make any plans for the celebration they intend to know just how they are coming out in the matter of contributions. Last year several of the city's business establishments—organizations that reap more profit from the show than any others—fell far behind in their contributions. There isn't any need to mince words, the restaurants and drinking establishments that "cleaned up" put the smallest contributions into the Pumpkin Show treasury. Show officials intend to see what they can do about that problem, and visits will be made by members of the finance committee to these places of business as soon as possible to ask cooperation. It is imperative that business houses that receive the most benefit from the Pumpkin Show should contribute most to keep it going. It seems only fair that such a policy be enforced. Another problem for Pumpkin Show directors is that of providing a location for the Junior Fair now that the army is out of the question. Just where the Junior Show and 4-H Club exhibits will be located is not known. Directors do not have any idea where they might satisfactorily conduct the features. Anyone having a suggestion should come forward.

TO RELIGIOUS COUNCIL

CHURCH FOLK: The annual convention of the Pickaway County Council of Religious Education will be conducted Sunday in the Presbyterian Church, Circleville, and from all indications the convention will be one of the most successful conducted in recent years. The program promises to be to the point, without great length, and full of interest. Outstanding speakers have been obtained, discussion leaders are well versed and should have excellent messages for their listeners. The award of attendance banners, always one of the highlights of the convention, will be looked forward to by all who attend. An effort is being made this year to make the convention something that youths will remember so they will be certain to return next year. The supper meeting at 6 o'clock promises to be a grand one with the president of Otterbein College to speak. A one act play in the evening should be highly entertaining and educational. I hope that officials of the Council are successful in their endeavors and that the meeting will be the best in recent years.

CIRCUITEER.

TO YOUTHS

BOYS: This note is addressed to young fellows of the community who do not have jobs and have slight prospects of obtaining gainful employment in the near future. Uncle Sam is calling for young men to join his army, his navy and his air corps to be prepared for any emergency that might develop in our World. A list of Ohio youths was announced early this week as being placed in the air corps training schools throughout the land. War isn't a nice subject, but all of us are hearing plenty about war right now with a couple of mad dogs running loose in Europe. And who knows what may develop if the French and British are not able to provide them with muzzles. No one wants war, and no one wants to go to war, but it might be a good idea to be prepared for it if it is thrust on us. Young unemployed men might be doing themselves, and their country, a great favor by obtaining training and being physically and mentally able to do their part. The CCC provides another outlet for youths who are without jobs. A move to militarize the CCC by permitting military training has bogged down, but it is probable that another attempt to place armed training in the CCC will be made.

CIRCUITEER.

TO RICHARD PENN

STUDENT: Congratulations go to you for your splendid work at Kenyon College where you are making splendid strides in the study of science. There are hundreds of young fellows in our community who would like to be in your shoes this summer when you accompany one of your professors to the Rockies to view cosmic rays. The subject of cosmic rays is clear out of my world, but the study must be an interesting one.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

WENDELL L. WILLKIE, the Commonwealth and Southern power magnate and Republican presidential possibility, succeeded in getting third-term New Dealers thoroughly sore the other day by expressing a yearning to debate with Franklin D. Roosevelt the question:

Has Roosevelt done as good a job for the United States as Willkie has done for public utilities? Of course, Willkie's plain implication was that he'd win the argument easily. That made the Rooseveltians hot, for one thing. What made them still hotter was his claim to credit for a 100 percent loyal utility organization, whereas the president's "bureaucracy, feeding upon political preference and privilege, has developed within itself the inevitable forces of discord and disharmony."

The New Dealers have to admit that there's a bit of disharmony between "pro" and "anti" New Deal Democrats, but they don't like to have it harped upon by Wendell Willkie, who was a Democrat himself until comparatively recently.

POOR COMPARISON

And anyway, they say, such an outfit as the United States government can't imaginably be as free from differences of opinion among officials as an autocratically run concern like Willkie's power kingdom; if one of Wendell's subordinates (even a very big one) shows signs of disagreeing with his boss in the slightest particular, Wendell fires him instantly.

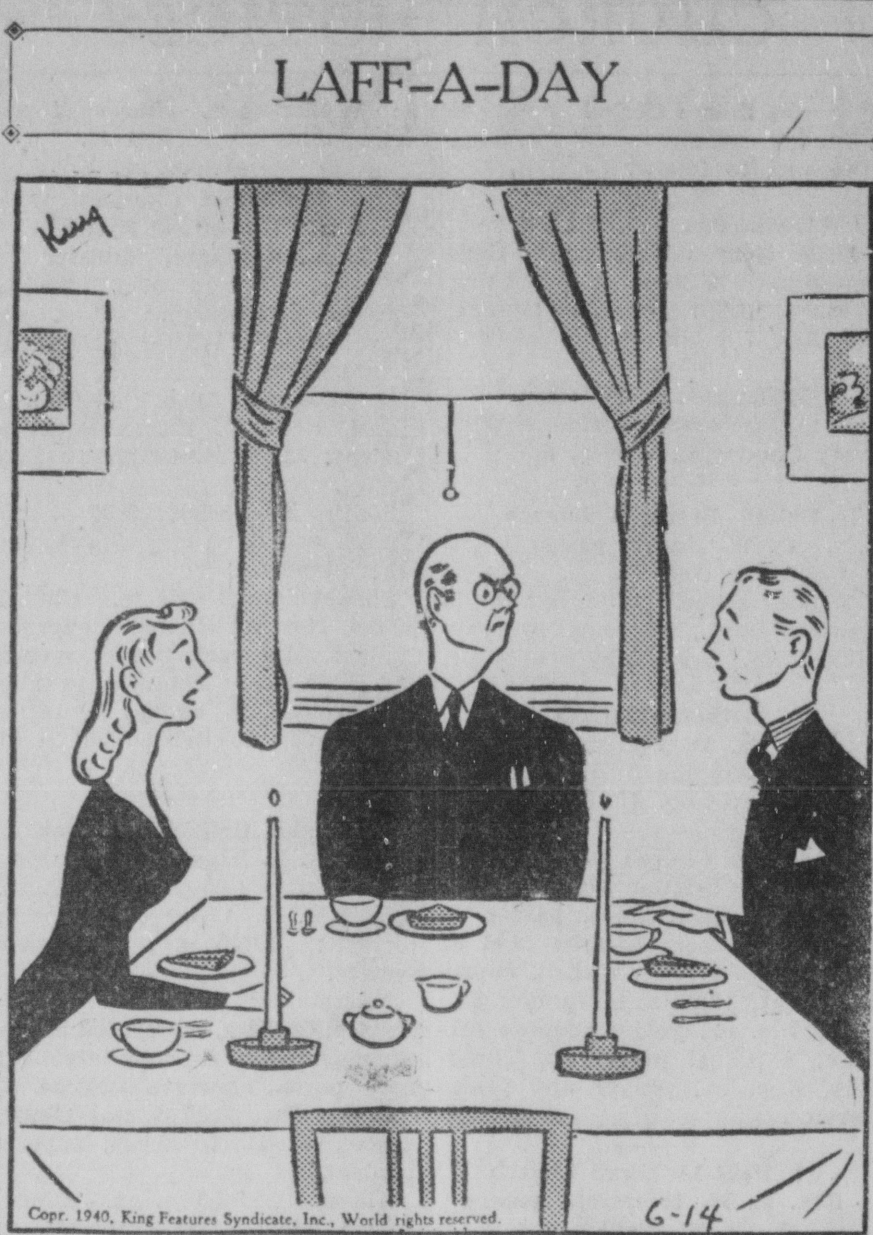

Those who remain are loyal, all right—they wouldn't remain otherwise—not unless they at least pretended to be mighty loyal. That's the New Dealers' story. But a president of the United States, they explain, can't be so high-handed; it wouldn't be democratic. They add that they don't believe Wendell ever was much of a Democrat with a big "D" either, although he called himself one for years and years.

Their theory is that he professed Democratic principles because his power realm is largely in Dixie (Commonwealth and Southern) and probably he considered it good business to align himself with the popular kind of southern politics.

NO HEREDITARY ARISTOCRAT It isn't made quite so clear why he flopped to Republicanism lately. Maybe he flopped because he sensed a change in southern political sentiment.

The fact is that Wendell always seemed to me (I've met him frequently in a newspaperman's capacity) to be quite a satisfactory little "d" Democrat. Anyhow, he's informal, approachable and an excellent mixer. There's nothing aristocratic about him.

I've met some of his underlings, also. They don't refer to him as a hard-boiled boss. Contrarywise they describe him as a good fellow, but perhaps this is because he scares 'em into it.

"Really, dear, I think you've been mistaken. Mr. Ellis doesn't impress me as a slave-driver at all!"

Dr. Gibbs Takes Lesson From Ol' Man River

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● "WHAT A wonderful view!" exclaimed my old friend Dr. Adrian Gibbs to a downcast and surly-looking man who sat in his office. "I selected this room on account of it."

"There it is basking in the beauty of the early summer day. That curving stretch of water in the valley is one of the greatest rivers in the world. My friend, it is longer and more tortuous and more important even than your intestinal tract. And it seems to be enjoying itself more than your intestines. True, sometimes it gets stopped or clogged up a little in the spring, just like your intestines, when it brings down all the debris of winter from the mountains and the plains. But it doesn't worry about it. It just lets things alone and by and by it breaks through those obstructions, goes mightily on its way to the sea—to become one with eternity."

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

"You and I are doing that, my friend. Long before we were, and long after we are gone, that river will be gathering far back in the mountains and flowing down to merge itself in the ocean. And it has such a good time while it's doing it! I think there is a lesson in that. It goes on lustily without regard to gossip or rumor or discouraging advice, even, as I say, when there is a little interruption in its steady flow. Why don't you do that—enjoy yourself a little while you're here?"

"Lift Your Eyes"
"Then there's another thing about that view. See those hills over there. Fine hills! I will lift mine eyes unto the hills. Lift them up; not cast them towards your miserable belly."
"See that animal over yonder outlined against the sky? I use that occasionally as an illustration for my medical students. They are always thinking of the unusual diagnoses to hang on a patient. Just as you have been. You've thought of having cancer, and then somebody told you about lymphoma of the intestines and you've been worrying about that, and several other fancy suggestions have popped in your head from reading or overhearing your neighbors talk about what the doctor said to Bill at the clinic."

"Now you know the unusual things in this world fortunately are in the minority. You take that animal over those silhouetted against the sky. Must be five miles away. Can just barely see him move. You know it's alive all right, it's an animal but you can't distinguish details. Now suppose somebody asked you what it was. Would you say, 'It's a Royal Bengal Tiger'? Course it might be—escaped from a circus. But the chances are it is just a plain Missouri mule."

"Now that applies to your trouble. You have thought of its being everything except the common thing which is what it most certainly is. Your beliefs haven't got cancer—they simply lack ambition. And that's your fault because instead of sending them pep messages over the telegraph system of your nerves, you are constantly sending them discouragements. You keep wiring them, 'You're no good. What's the use of trying?'"

"Well, I guess that's all for today, my friend. If you needed any medicine I would give it to you."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

The name of Henry Page Folsom, Jr., was given to the newly organized post of Veterans of Foreign Wars by consent of Mrs. H. P. Folsom.

The public opening of the Cassabelle Tea Room was set for Saturday, June 14, when dedication exercises were to be conducted by the Federal Housing committee of Pickaway County.

Thirteen members of the Motor Transport outfit left for Cincinnati to haul a company of troops to Camp Perry where they were to train for 15 days. Frank Littleton was in command, the outfit using 10 new trucks.

10 YEARS AGO

George Foreman was installed as president of the Circleville Rotary Club. Forty members enjoyed the evening at the Pickaway Country Club, many Rotarians playing golf in the afternoon.

Miss Eleanor Ryan, daughter of W. J. Ryan, was graduated from Ohio State University in the college of education. She received a degree of bachelor of science and education.

Miss Elizabeth Roundhouse accepted a position in the law office of Meeker Terwilliger.

25 YEARS AGO

Forty-one boys and girls who successfully passed the "A" grammar grades taught by Miss Clara Littleton and Miss Alice Pedrick were received in the high school. "E" letters were conferred on nine boys who distinguished themselves on the football field.

Miss Sarah Steward Swearingen, a student at Bishopphorpe Manor, South Bethlehem, Pa., and William Swearingen, who attended the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., returned home for the summer.

Miss Annie McMahon, formerly of Circleville, who had been teaching in Saluda, N. C., left to spend the summer vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McMahon, of Albany, Wisc.

To teach children to turn out lights in the home when they are not needed, one mother estimated the average light bill for the month, then set the money aside, telling the youngsters that whatever was saved after the bill was paid would be evenly divided between them. CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

MRS. MOLLY VAN ORSDALE, the city's most aggressive and most successful society editor, reasoned that The Oaks was likely to be a frequent source of society news after the re-opening of the old mansion. She had dropped in on the party given for Jeremy and had attended the play "Maid to Measure." She had waited a few days after that (but with an ear to possible hearsay news around town) and when she felt that the time was ripe she drove her car out to The Oaks again. She arrived there on the afternoon when the young people were discussing the new play. Indeed, she was a scant 10 minutes behind Lola Montesa, who had started all the others by her unexpected return. Graham announced Mrs. Van Orsdale to Gayle. "Oh! Yes, please ask her to come right on out here with us, Graham."

That's exactly what Mrs. Molly preferred. She could "sit in" with the planning. She greeted all of them cordially, plumped down into the big swing beside Gayle and Lola.

"Whenever these many youngsters are in a huddle," she began, smiling, "there is bound to be news. Now somebody just start talking and I'll hold up my big ears."

Bill spoke then. "Not much society news, I'm afraid. We were just discussing the new play, Mrs. Van Orsdale."

"The new play? . . . New play? . . . Young man, that's certainly news!"

They outlined it for her, discussed it and enjoyed having her enter into the planning as if she were one of them. Molly Van Orsdale could be at home practically anywhere and make herself a joy there. All at once she turned to Lola.

"And will you sing again in this play?" she asked. "I so enjoyed your music in the other one. And you're such a lovely person, my dear!"

Lola's eyes dropped. "Thank you," she said. "I love the music. I'm good to sing."

Bill was gesturing with his play script, pointing to them. "She—she surely will sing again in this one, Mrs. Van Orsdale! Everybody liked her music."

The others were even more enthusiastic. It may be, because of the strained situation regarding Lola, that Gayle and Bill and Jeremy, and to a lesser extent the other girls, overdid their enthusiasm. Tempe Hyde, alone of those present, had nothing to say, and she was slightly conspicuous therefore. Bill observed again the quick flash of putting, or anger or hatred—he wasn't sure just what—that her countenance revealed. Not even Tempe's spectacles afforded sufficient cover.

While the women present seemed all to talk at once, Bill speculated for a moment on the types before him. He had hired six of them himself, selected them from several hundred who came by invitation to Mr. Merrifield's home. They were chosen primarily for beauty, and had not disappointed in this. He had shrewdly judged their intelligence, too. But—he was realizing more and more—he had given no attention whatsoever to what might be termed emotional variations. He had not thought of what attachments and friendships and loves and angers and jealousies might grow out of six youthful hearts, nor indeed what peculiar diodes his own heart might undergo while dealing with the girls.

Bill had imagined himself hard. Because he had torn through the strongest football tacklers in his college conference a few months ago, and because he was pretty good at swimming and boxing as well, he naively imagined himself immune to sentiment. To his great consternation of late, however, he had found himself quite as human as any other honest man; he had found himself unable to cope with Lola Montesa's tears or even to understand her or be consistent in his opinions regarding her. Now, too, the cute and peppery Tempe Hyde was defying his past cataloging of her in his mind. Bill sighed. Life was more complicated than it had seemed from the college campus.

When Mrs. Van Orsdale had made her gracious but hurried departure, Gayle Dixon came back to the group beaming.

"Listen, Bill!" She was so comically pretty, standing there near him, that Bill was awed. "Mrs. Van Orsdale likes us immensely. I know! We're going to have a great deal of publicity again."

He nodded. "And Bill, I know that a lot of people came to our first play just out of curiosity to see The Oaks, really. They weren't so concerned in the drama as in the social aspects, the—the traditions here, and everything, and—"

"Sure. That's so. One of the other girls said that."

"All right. The point is, Bill, people want more than a play from us, I believe. They want to be 'in' on affairs here. Or what they imagine are important affairs. Don't you see?"

Jeremy Tucker, sitting quietly near Bill, moved as if he might say something, but did not. His expression indicated that he was confused. He wasn't yet entirely at ease in these gatherings. At the moment he felt like an intruder again, had an urge to leave them and be alone. His face was quite serious as he looked now at Bill.

"No doubt about that," Bill agreed. "That's why we must put on another play pretty soon, to take advantage of the interest we've aroused."

"All right," Gayle went on, "but couldn't we give them more than a play?"

"You mean—?"

"Uh huh! Another ball. A—sort of theatrical party, Bill! Maybe with—"

"Sa-a-a-a-a-a-a-a-a-a!" Bill Bailey sat up erect. He clenched his fist and gestured in sudden enthusiasm. "You're right, Gayle! . . . You're right! Look—we'll give them some sure enough festivity! We'll open up The Oaks again with a bang that'll be heard all over the city. We'll—"

"We have a better play than we had before," Gayle plunged in, beaming happily. "A much nicer play, I think, Bill, even if you did write it. I mean, because you wrote it, maybe!" They all laughed with her.

"No, honestly, it's much better. And if we could have a ball with music and dancing to go with it—the mansion here is so large and Mr. Merrifield would love it, I'll bet. And Jeremy could—look, Jeremy, don't you think it's grand? You see what we mean? Amateur plays are social events, really, but we could make this one especially fine, and you'd meet a lot of interesting people, and make some new friends and all. See?"

Jeremy swallowed. He wasn't sure he understood, but he loved to see the enthusiasm in the others and he wanted desperately to share it and be a part of their planning. The urge to flee which he had felt a moment ago, now had competition in his heart. He was still confused, but he wanted to be "in" on things himself!

"See here—I—yes! Yes, Gayle! If you like it, I do!"

He couldn't have said it better. If you like it, I do! Plainly, young Jeremy Tucker was happier and happier to be guided by Gayle. Plainly he was awed not only by her physical beauty, but by her personality and tact as well. He'd all observed it—Tempe Hyde, the other girls, Bill, Gayle herself. Gayle cupped in her lower lip for an instant—pretty little mannerism which was characteristic of her—and the other girls laughed in sudden understanding. All save Tempe Hyde, who looked glumly through her glasses. And Lola, who gazed ever so seriously at them like a dark-eyed child who didn't quite understand.

The brightness had faded quickly from Bill's face. He knew precisely how Jeremy felt, he was thinking. For a black moment Bill felt a return of the anger and jealousy he had felt. It stung him to see Jeremy drawn closer and closer to Gayle Dixon, spiritually.

Stung him, and yet contradictorily gave him a vague, painful sense of satisfaction as well. He, Bill, owned nothing of value in this world, possessed no money save the day-to-day expenses needed for his odd employment here. Even this employment couldn't last many months, he realized, and times were undeniably hard out in the world. On the other hand, Jeremy Tucker was a millionaire, secure for life. Bill so wanted Gayle to know security, so longed for her to have happiness in life. Since Jeremy could afford it for her—Bill sighed. "Then it's all set," he agreed, going back to the play, and talking very factually and seriously now. "I have talked a lot with Mr. Merrifield, and so has Gayle. We have pretty good ideas of what will please him, and what he wants. I believe he would approve this plan entirely. So, let's huddle some more, and give this city the hottest piece of society news it's had in 25 years!"

2. What is meant by the "gag rule" in the United States house of representatives?
3. What post has Anthony Eden been given in the new British cabinet?

Hints on Etiquette

Unless there is some extremely unusual reason for being close-mouthed when you make a call over the telephone, tell the person who answers it who you are and what you want. People who refuse to identify themselves or state their business, make themselves objects of suspicion.

Word of Wisdom

The seeds of our punishment are sown at the same time we commit the sin.—Hesiod.

Today's Horoscope

Check extravagance and exercise prudence in your correspondence and love affairs, is the advice given to those whose birthdays are today. Otherwise your year will be a moderately favorable one. The child who is born on this date will be refined, artistic, kind-hearted, sympathetic and generous in nature, but liable to suffer from deception of disappointment in love.

One-Minute Test Answers

1. At Petersburg, Va., in 1829, by Frances Follet.
2. It refers to the regulations for the limitation of debate.
3. Minister of war.

You're Telling Me!

DAD, READING the latest news from Europe, is reminded that it's high time he launched his mechanized (or lawn mower) warfare against the front lawn weeds.

One item that leaves the man in the street unmoved is the news that the war has caused a shortage of Russian caviar and French pate de foie gras.

Maybe Mussolini got into the war too soon. It would appear the Allies have not yet been whittled down to his size.

European artist flees to America—news item. Evidently opines Grandpappy Jenkins, things are worse over there than they are painted.

Now that he's in the war Mussolini may discover that a balcony is no place to be during a blitzkrieg.

People are reading more books than ever before today, says a noted librarian. That's odd—with the front pages more exciting than a novel ever was.

And Zadok Dumbkopf wonders if Italy really is—Ethiopia and Albania being hardly the kind of sparring partners needed when training for a world's heavyweight championship fight.

In the course of evolution nature should be able to produce a bomb-proof civilian.

STARS SAY—

For Friday, June 14

ACCORDING to the lunar transits bearing rule on the affairs of this day there may be much need for discretion, prudence, vigilance and calm action if difficulties and anxieties are to be averted. This applies to all phases of contacts and endeavor, social emotional, intellectual and business. There is particular discord from indulgence in impetuosity, reckless or intemperate conduct, either in correspondence or sentimental relationships. Extravagance, self-indulgence in all forms are to be curbed and sudden moves or changes may prove regrettable.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which smooth sailing and harmony depend on personal restraints, control of emotions and physical appetites as well as business moderation of conduct. Extravagance, impetuosity, turbulence and menace all situations, with particular storm and stress, unhappiness and disruption in the intimate relations. All writings should be calmly considered.

A child born on this day may be fiery and energetic but prone to self-indulgence, extravagance, impetuosity and passion in all its relations. However, it may have social graces with kindness and generosity of heart.

Electric Company
Official Here
25 Years

The Circleville division of the Columbus and Ohio Southern Electric Company honored Charles T. Gilmore of the Circleville office at a surprise formal dinner Thursday at the Pickaway Country Club. The affair marked Mr. Gilmore's twenty-fifth year as office manager.

Mr. Gilmore, whose home was in Jersey City, N. J., came to Circleville 25 years ago from Portland, Me., where he had been connected with an electric company for eight years. The local company was at that time known as the Circleville Light and Power company. About 1916-1917, uniting with Delaware, Hillsboro, Gallopis and Chillicothe, the name was changed to the Ohio Utilities company. Through other company changes in 1926 the name became the Southern Ohio Electric company. This was used until it merged with the Columbus Railway and Light company since then being known as the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric company.

Dinner was served at 7 p. m. on the large porch of the club house. The guest of honor was seated with Mrs. Gilmore and officials of the company at a large round banquet table centered with a beautiful bowl of dark red rose buds. Silver doilies and lacy green vines were used on the white cloth, and four tall silver tapers flanked the centerpiece.

The other tables were centered with red roses and silver doilies completed the decorations.

Mr. Gilmore received an appropriate gift of silver marking his anniversary.

The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore, Horace Gilmore, Russell Imler, L. S. Lytle, Roy Harrington, Richard Henn, Henry Davis, Everett Stockton, Roy Purcell, Nolan Sims, Russell Lane, Ludwig Haecker, Elmer Delong, Miss Elizabeth Drum, Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer, Miss Lucille McClure of Circleville; S. Factographs

Maybe this is a very big country, but it's next to impossible to find on Sunday an ideal picnic spot that isn't already taken.

This is the time of year when many pupils receive medals for never having been tardy — and wonder whether it was worth while.

None of us need be schooled in music to appreciate the beauty of a note—the lovely sound of the quitting whistle.

City Receives Certificate, Joins Ohio Safety Program

State Officials Visit
Circleville, Promise
Aid In Undertaking

Two officials from the State Highway department, Columbus, Friday, presented Safety Director Karl Herrmann with an All-State Safety Contest certificate, after the service director had announced that Circleville would participate in the state 1940 safety contest.

The officials, J. Perry Schumaker and R. B. Harwood, complimented Safety Director Herrmann on the effective traffic safety program in Circleville and told him that they wanted to co-operate in every manner possible to further reduce traffic accidents in the city.

The All-Ohio Traffic Safety contest is being sponsored by the State Department of Highways, with the active support of mayors and municipal officials, automobile clubs, Ohio State Safety Council and various other groups. The contest in which Circleville is participating includes Ohio municipalities with populations between 5,000 and 10,000. There are 50 other cities in Ohio in the same classification as Circleville, taking part in the 1940 contest, which closes March 15, 1941.

State Highway Official Schumaker told the safety director that the contest would serve both as an evaluation of the progress of cities participating in safety programs and as a stimulant to those cities not already engaged in safety activities.

RADIO THEATRE

The Radio Theatre is one of the few radio programs to run on the networks for six years without having to surrender one or more of its broadcasts to a news broadcast, political convention or political speech. Producer Cecil B. DeMille feared the record would be spoiled Monday, June 24th, the date the Republican convention opens in Philadelphia, but he has now been advised that it will not be. The Radio Theatre goes on the air as usual on that date. The convention does not go on the network until 9 p. m. just as the Radio Theatre concludes its broadcast.

CARPENTER PLAYS CARPENTER

By accident, Ken Carpenter, Music Hall announcer and chime ringer, plays the role of a radio announcer named "Ken Carpenter" in the Bing Crosby picture, "Rhythm on the River." Scenarists had given Carpenter another name, but John Scott Trotter, bandleader, who is an orchestra leader in the movie, made a long film take in which he called Carpenter by his real name instead of the script name. Instead of doing the takes over again, the director changed the announcer's name to "Ken Carpenter."

The largest fortune yet to be up for claim since the Court of Missing Heirs' inception, will be dramatized on the program Tuesday, at 7:30 p. m. when heirs to the million estate of Louisa Herle, who died last year in Brooklyn, New York are sought.

Other estates which will be subjects of dramatizations include the legacy of $13,000 left to missing Inez Pacini, who was placed in an American convent by her father, Fulvio Pacini, when he sailed for Italy and died there in 1939. Sidney Goldschneider is another heir being sought to claim the estate of $3200 left by his parents who recently died in Baltimore.

BOYS TO ENTER LEGION'S CAMP

Lloyd Jonnes, Jr., Richard Brintlinger Participate In Boy's State

Lloyd Jonnes, Jr., and Richard Brintlinger, who will be seniors in Circleville High School next term, will go to Columbus Saturday to participate in the American Legion Boys' State activities. The latter, designated previously as an alternate, will replace Robert Brown, who is working and will not participate in the Boys' State.

The youths were chosen from members of the junior class. Their expenses will be paid by the American Legion post and by the Rotary Club.

At the ten-day camp, beginning Saturday, the boys will have an opportunity to mix with 760 other boys from 80 counties in Ohio. The purpose of the camp is to teach young men the functions of government. Qualifications for enrollment in the camp are strict. Each boy must have an average grade of "C" in his high school studies, he must be of the eleventh grade, he must have demonstrated in school his preference for such studies as civics, public speaking or debating. Tour of Inspection Finds Ashville Factories Busy

By S. D. Fridley
Phone, Ashville 79

On our inspection rounds the first stop was made at the Main Street signal wags where the keeper-in-order man, Mr. Graham, along with a couple of higher up bosses, one of whom we had there a few weeks ago, were looking the working parts over and pronounced it all good. The grain elevators got our attention next and all hands were busy at this and that mostly filling orders for ground and mixed live stock feed. And some of this contains as many as 6 to 10 different ingredients, growing mash for chicks claiming the largest number. The large, new storage building of the "North House" is at a standstill in construction awaiting a shipment of steel, they told us. At the "South House", John Good is doing a "good" job fitting up the new room which already contains the new seed cleaner.

The cannery, with the smoke rolling from the chimney, was next in line for a look. First encountered Des Spangler and Wess Neff giving the storage room a cleaning up and out, ready for the new pack peas which were coming in that evening.

Engine room next stop, where Marion Glick and the old reliable engineer Prince Moore, were making it hot for the water with steam up and ready to go. Mr. Moore told us that this is the beginning of his 33rd year as engineer and engine room caretaker at the cannery. And according to our count he has missed but seven at the beginning, the cannery being built for corn canning only, in the spring of 1900 the first corn canned that fall.

The late Festus Walters and Wayne Caldwell were the principal organizers of the first canning company to operate here.

But back on the inspection trip again. By a here and there route, found our way to the pea huller which was producing a fine appearing lot of goods and soon ready for the cans. Among those we contacted here was our long time, printer friend Emmitt Fraunfelder weighing the boxed peas coming from the huller. And around at the vine conveyor were Harry Wellington, Dave Dunnick and some others doing unloading work, talking war, Davey and everything. Saw some fine gardens but we're not naming that best one.

Of the several apple trees nary apple appears and that'll save many a tummy ache for the boys.

City Receives Certificate, Joins Ohio Safety Program

State Officials Visit Circleville, Promise Aid In Undertaking

Two officials from the State Highway department, Columbus, Friday, presented Safety Director Karl Herrmann with an All-State Safety Certificate, after the service director had announced that Circleville would participate in the state 1940 safety contest.

The officials, J. Perry Schumaker and R. B. Harwood, complimented Safety Director Herrmann on the effective traffic safety program in Circleville and told him that they wanted to cooperate in every manner possible to further reduce traffic accidents in the city.

The All-Ohio Traffic Safety contest is being sponsored by the State Department of Highways, with the active support of mayors and municipal officials, automobile clubs, Ohio State Safety Council and various other groups. The contest in which Circleville is participating includes Ohio municipalities with populations between 5,000 and 10,000. There are 50 other cities in Ohio in the same classification as Circleville, taking part in the 1940 contest, which closes March 15, 1941.

State Highway Official Schumaker told the safety director that the contest would serve both as an evaluation of the progress of cities participating in safety programs and as a stimulant to those cities not already engaged in safety activities.

RADIO THEATRE

The Radio Theatre is one of the few radio programs to run on the networks for six years without having to surrender one or more of its broadcasts to a news broadcast, political convention or political speech. Producer Cecil B. DeMille feared the record would be spoiled Monday, June 24th, the date the Republican convention opens in Philadelphia, but he has now been advised that it will not be. The Radio Theatre goes on the air as usual on that date. The convention does not go on the networks until 9 p. m. just as the Radio Theatre concludes its broadcast.

CARPENTER PLAYS CARPENTER

By accident, Ken Carpenter, Music Hall announcer and chime ringer, plays the role of a radio announcer named "Ken Carpenter" in the Bing Crosby picture, "Rhythm on the River." Scenarists had given Carpenter another name, but John Scott Trotter, bandleader, who is an orchestra leader in the movie, made a radio film take in which he called Carpenter by his real name instead of the script name. Instead of doing the takes over again, the director changed the announcer's name to "Ken Carpenter."
